2020 SEASON HIGHLIGHTS
The Elbert County Historical Society and Museum started the year like those prior—with planning exhibits and programs for the summer season, reaching out and meeting with sponsors, and preparing for the 20th Annual Pioneer Fourth. Then the COVID-19 pandemic hit and everything came to a screeching halt.

Out of concern for museum volunteers and visitors, ECHS Board members made the difficult decision to close the museum for 2020 and cancel the Pioneer Fourth celebration. In addition, they unanimously extended all sponsorships into 2021 in appreciation to all our generous season sponsors. Contributions were made through East Central Enterprise Zone, Colorado Gives and in person (to see a complete list of our sponsors, look for the banner in the front of the museum, on our website, and on the back of this publication).

And yet despite being closed, online artifact donation inquiries and history requests increased significantly this summer... the pandemic it seems gave individuals an excuse to clean out closets and basements, as well as revisit long, lost family trees.

Lastly, thank you for helping ECHS reach and exceed our goal of $1,000 during the annual Colorado Gives Day on December 8.

THE MORE THINGS CHANGE, THE MORE THEY ARE THE SAME
Looking back into our not-so-distant past, we recently delved into the 1918 issues of the Elbert newspaper, the Elbert County Tribune, and discovered striking similarities between the Spanish Influenza epidemic and today. Even then there was encouragement to social distance and rolling quarantines.

QUILTING DURING A DECADE OF DISASTERS

Following the good times of the “Roaring Twenties” the decade of the 1930’s brought many hardships to Elbert County residents in the form of drought, depression, dust bowl, and floods. Along with shrinking pocketbooks and limited resources women met many challenges in providing for the basic needs of their loved ones. Relying on the common craft of handmade quilts that had been handed down for centuries, women and young ladies carefully gathered fabric scraps from home made clothing to make warm bed coverings for the family.

Often ladies would meet together in a “Quilting Bee”, where they shared patterns, fabric and help in the construction and finishing of their quilts. Occasionally a woman might earn a bit of extra money by making quilts for someone else.

1930’s ladies looked forward to the quilting patterns offered in the Kansas City Star newspaper and in some local newspapers also. Popular patterns of this time were the Wedding Ring, Dresden Plate, Grandmother’s Flower Garden, and Star of Bethlehem to name a few.

A unique variety of fabric prints were developed which brightened the dark days of this decade of disasters. Feed sacks began to be available in colors by the late 1920’s and by the mid-to-late 1930’s mills were competing to attract women by offering the most popular prints on sacks of sugar, flour, beans, and cornmeal. This competition allowed ladies to purchase food not by any particular brand but in the fabrics they wanted.

Some of these quilts have become cherished family heirlooms adding to the historic value of our past.

BARN QUILTS

Similar to cloth quilts, barn quilts can be equally telling and just as beautiful. This folk-art tradition originated in Ohio about twenty years ago, when Donna Sue Groves sought out a creative way to honor her mother and painted a quilt block on the end of her barn.

Since then, “Quilt Trails” have sprung up across the United States and Canada with beautiful quilt squares appearing not only on barns, but even unconventional places like buildings along small-town main streets, rural mailboxes, gardens and more.

Many of these quilt blocks are constructed of plywood or smooth MDF board and vary in size depending on where they are placed, but generally barn-mounted quilt blocks range from four to eight feet square. The patterns on these wooden squares can be colorful, intricately detailed and personal; and are limited only by their creator’s imagination.

Colorado has several Barn Quilt Trails spread across the state. A couple notable ones can be found in Grand County, Morgan County and Palisade.
ELBERT COUNTY MUSEUM SPONSORS

While the museum receives funds through monetary donations given at the museum and with annual historical society memberships; Season Sponsorships and the Pioneer Fourth celebration are the main areas of income which allow the Elbert County Historical Society to develop exhibits and educational opportunities and to improve and maintain the museum building.

Thank you for your commitment to the educational and historical importance of the Elbert County Museum!
